

Jane Satterfield (Featured Poet)

AUTHOR BIO

The Most Wuthering Heights Day Ever

An annual gathering held in various locations across the globe since 2016; participants recreate the music video of British singer Kate Bush's 1978 hit song "Wuthering Heights."

You love it wild—the wind & weather,
red lipstick perfect for a new romance—
Today will be the most Wuthering Heights Day ever.

You've seen the Kate Bush video: voice aquiver,
she sings "Wuthering Heights" half in a trance—
red Cathy dress rippling in the wind & weather.

With green eye shadow you'll conjure moors & heather.
Gals, grannies, bearded blokes will synchronize in dance—
Will today be their most "Wuthering Heights" Day ever?

Some love the song but not the book—whatever!
To Emily, local gossip & happenstance would yield her novel's whirl of wind & weather,

though scholars wonder, "Did she have a lover?"
Three hundred Cathys attract more than a glance, moves choreographed: the most "Wuthering Heights" Day ever.

From Dublin to Tel Aviv, fans catch the fever—
cellphones capturing flash mobs as they twirl, advance,
and love it, wildly—the wind and weather synched for the most Wuthering Heights Day ever.